SELECTED. MY MOTHER'S LAST PRAYER.

As often as I turn to the past, I recall a mother's last prayer, for there is in the nary large Prizes for a small cost of Ticketsprayers she offered at the "Throne of Grace" power in the breathings of that moment-and in the brief words, "My child, mother prays that your home may be Heaven," I see more beauty than in all the figures of idle rhetoric, and feel them to be more potent than others that have since ascended to heaven in my be-

When they had lain her away forever, and my young heart felt as if it would burst with the intenseness of its grief, its wild beatings were stopped by the recalling of her dying hour—surrounded by a halo of holy light and momentarily passing more rapidly away, still remembered her babes and consecrated them anew to God-oh dark, yet cherished moments, why was it that you ever came and spread your mantle of sorrow over the child's young heart, and caused even the babes to weep tears of bitter anguish?

In after years when I have seen other orphans pour out their souls in grief deeply bitter, from mine has risen a prayer, such as I would none could ever need raise to "God's Throne." Oh, mother, home, Heaven, how powerful, how powerful, bow holy are the influences you exert, and truly all may draw from your wells of life, the reviving waters of faith which cause even children to feel the pureness of their Father's will.

"My child, mother prays that Heaven may be your home," will never be forgotten, even though life's darkest storms break over my head with unrelenting fury. Yes, mother, whan you prayed that prayer as a saint's offering, it arose, and when you lifted your heart, your shild's, too, arose; and often since, when I have doubted my worthiness to my Saviour's . Kingdom, "Mother prays" is recalled, and I doubt no longer. In my childishness I have sometimes thought perhaps in Heaven mother still prays that prayer; and though I know it to be all a fancy, still in its seeming reality, there is a hope so sweet, so cheering, that I can scarce own it as a child's whim. My mother's last prayer -- bow sweet to feel that is left, and still lives in memory. Oh, mother! Would that all your counsels could have lived as does your prayer-for then, it may be, your child would not so often have erred; yet, perhaps it is best, for if we taste not of life's dark, bitter streams, Heaven's joys lose one half their charms.

Think not that this is an idle fiction; no: though I would that it could never need to have been a reality, yet it was one, and my mother's last prayer is that gift that I prize far more highly than all others, and then oft from life's withering power,

"In still communion with the past, I turn, I muse on her, the brightest flower in memory's

I nightly pray her,

"To bless her sorrowing child, and o'er that urn, Religion's holiest shrine to give my spirit Undefiled to blend with hers."

WILLIAM TELL OUTDONE.

A weaver of Speyer, in Germany, recently performed an exploit, which casts the dexterity of our Travis or Suydam, completely in the shade. He was the father of a fine boy, an affectionate husband, and known as the a saint and chance to excel in some one to the Managers, R. FRANCE & CO, Balti- separate slips of paper, are encircled with small thing, and he is sure to have enemies without thing, and he is sure to have enemies without number. One day as the weaver sat smoking direct their letters to the Managers, R. FRANCE direct their letters to the Managers, R. FRANCE in the prevention of those direct their letters to the Managers, R. FRANCE in the prevention of th ic a bar-room of a small inn, some of those mean characters approached him, and commenced bantering him upon his accuracy of aim. At first he treated their remarks as mere jokes, but thier pertinacity at length overcame his good bumor, and in a towerto give undeniable proof of his superiority or "perish in the attempt." Accordingly be called his little boy, a lad of twelve years old, informed him that be had "a charmed rificball," and could not fail to strike any mark, at the same time ordering him to place any ordinary sized potatoe upon his head, and stand at the foot of a long alley, while he mand, and the markeman fired, cutting the stance where large prizes are offered for a small vegetable in two pieces, and leaving him without a scratch. Overjoyed at the success taunted him to the proof, and professed to believe that he was cheating them. Nothing daunted, he took them to his bouse, and recalling the bey, made him stand as before .-Again the chila took his position, and, it be ing nearly dark, held a lantern while his father fired the dangerous shot. A second time the potato was cloven, while the boy stood unscratched. His envious friends applauded, of course; but the authorities hearing of the matter, caused the weaver to be arrested, and brought before them. They reprimanded him for the heartless deed, and declared if he ever renewed the experiment, they would shut him up in a mad house -He describes his feelings during the second essay as exciting and agonizing in the extreme; but he was determined to succeed even at the risk of killing his child.

PSYLLOGRAPHY. A new branch of art-has just acquired great development. It consists simply in cutting out sheets of black paper in such a way as to make it into a picture--figures or landscapes-which has all the finish of an engraving by the best masters. It appears that psyllography is a German discovery, its Columbus being one Herr Schmidt, who armed with a pair of scissors and a sheet of paper, is able to reproduce the most complicated landscpe; great improvements have been introduced by M. Muratiri an Italian, who has just arrived in Paris from Ravenna, whose sciesors are far more skilful, according to competent judges, than the brush and pencil of many a limner.

CLOTHING.

THE GREAT SOUTHERN CLOTHING AS EVER.—I beg leave to announce to my friends, in this city and abroad, that I am now daily receiving a large stock of SPRING and SUMMER CLOTHING, which, having been manufactured to my especial order at the North, I am enabled to guarantee them for good, durable, and well made Clothing, which I can sell at Northern prices, and cheaper than any other establishment in this city. Country merchants would do well, before purchasing elsewhere, to call and examine my well selected stock of Clothing, which I will sell at such rates that | 0 they again can sell them at Alexandria retail

I have, also, on my last visit to the North, made arrangements for manufacturing Clothing to measure, at the shortest notice; which, for neatness, fashion, and durability, will defy competition.

In the Furnishing line, I am supplied from the first manufactories, and am always kept posted as to the latest styles. Gentlemen's SHIRTS made to order, and warranted to fit, or no sale. All I ask is a trial. Remember the well-known "Great Southern CLOTHING HOUSE," No. 100 King street, opposite Sarepta Hall. SIMON WATERMAN. Sarepta Hall. ар 5--- у
